Travis Hafner, Austin Kearns, Jensen Lewis, Grady Sizemore, and Jamey Wright to provide Cleveland-area children with an unforgettable day at the ballpark

Cleveland, Ohio, Tuesday, May 4, 2010 — Prior to this evening's game at Progressive Field in Cleveland, Indians players Travis Hafner, Austin Kearns, Jensen Lewis, Grady Sizemore and Jamey Wright will provide everlasting memories to a group of children from Asian Services in Action as the Major League Baseball Players Trust's "Buses for Baseball" program motors into Cleveland.

Courtesy of the players' charitable foundation, the children will receive round-trip transportation to the game, meet the players, and receive free tickets, food, beverages and souvenirs. "Buses for Baseball" will provide many of the children with their first chance to attend a Major League Baseball game.

This season, "Buses for Baseball", a program administered by the Players Trust, will provide transportation, game tickets and personal greetings for more than 1,500 underprivileged children from the U.S., Canada and Puerto Rico attending Major League Baseball games as invited guests of their big league heroes.

The Players Trust enjoys support from the Cleveland Indians organization in providing this unique, up close and personal opportunity to share the thrill of Major League Baseball with those less fortunate.
